

It is my understanding the FCC is being asked to step in and tell State Governments whether or not the "No Call" guidelines they have in place are too stringent. During the Clinton administration, we heard the call from the Republican Party that there was "too much government." It's time for the Republican Party to back up their 90's mantra and leave the States to their own accord.

If anything, our State's No Call list protocol isn't stringent enough. I for one don't want anyone calling my house that I have no affiliation to. If I wanted calls from someone, I would solicit it. I want the State of Wisconsin's No Call list to become stronger, not weaker. I ask you to stay away from the slippery slope of telling State Government's how they should handle the business of their residents and disregard the pleas of over-zealous and often unscrupulous telemarketers.
